19th, December, 1884.

I have had great pleasure in examining Mrs. TAIT
 in the following subjects:—

UPPER DIVISION.

Algebra, to the end of Simple Equation.
Euclid—Part of the First Six Elements.
English History—From Henry VIII. to George I.
Grecian History.—The Peloponnesian War.
English History.—From Henry II. to Henry IV.
Grecian History.—Great Britain, Asia, Cosmo-graphy.
English Grammar, Analysis and Composition.
The Globes.

LOWER DIVISION.

Arithmetic.
English History, from Henry VIII. to George I.
Geography.—Europe and Asia.
English Grammar.

I have been particularly pleased with the manner in which the pupils have improved in viva answered, both on paper and in viva voce, especially with regard to the former, which was remarkable for their neatness and accuracy, far exceeding of ordinary average. It is a pity that these young ladies could distinguish between the English and the American, and that they should have disgraced themselves, was a subject which is as frequently neglected, and even when presented to be taught, is unsatisfactory in its results—English composition.

The essays were written in the schoolroom, under supervision, and the results were not very encouraging, so that there can be no doubt of their genuineness.

These compositions show that Mrs. Tarr's pupils are not so much taught grammar thoroughly, but that they are taught to understand it, and, probably to apply what they have been taught.

the choicest pieces selected from Wallace's extensive repertoire of songs of "Merrittism," and as usual with this society's singing, the first to last, was deserving of the highest praise. We may mention particularly the delightful duet for soprano and contralto, "Sainted Mother," which was excellently sung, as well as the famous ballad "A Soldier's Heart," for contralto. The celebrated tenor song "Let me be a soldier fair," was also beautifully executed, and met with a well-merited encore. The bass song "This heart by the CONCERT.—A complimentary concert was given yesterday evening, in the Masonic Hall, to Signor Cusolo, "as a tribute to his eminent musical talents and in recognition of his personal and social worth." During Signor Cusolo's residence in Sydney he has been known in musical circles as a brilliant and graceful pianist—as a composer of merit and as an earnest teacher of his art. The large and distinguished audience which gathered to witness the

His death never acknowledged or least might showed that his talent as a musician and his worth as a private citizen are held in high esteem, and it was evident from the enthusiasm displayed that by a large number his absence from the colony will be regretted as a personal loss. The concert was under the management of the Hon. C. Cooper, Esq., M.L.A., and a committee of gentlemen, who have secured the services of La Ragona & Co.

and several other lady amateurs. La Señalita Valera, although an amateur, is a vocalist of superior attainments, having studied with advantage under some of the most talented masters in Spain, and finished her musical education in London and Paris. Among the gentlemen amateurs, who also rendered valuable service, were Mr. J. Waller and Mr. J. Eusebio. The performance of the Brothers Herman was a musical treat. These did display great taste and skill as a pianist, the other did his best to maintain the superiority of the violin.

musical instruments. The concert commenced generally at 8, with an instrumental solo, by Signor Ostle—as "Etude de Concert," composed by himself. Mr. J. Buabli sang the aria, "Infelice e tu credi," a lady sang or then sang, with considerable sweetness and style, "Com' e bello," from Lucrezia Borgia. The solo which followed—a fantasia on themes from the Hagen—was the signal for enthusiastic applause. It was a composition of Thalberg, the production of whose performance was proverbially difficult, in fact, it is often said, to

The instrumental duet, for pianoforte and violin, executed by the brothers Herman, was a magnificent performance, to which brilliancy of execution and classic taste were combined. The fantasia, by Thalberg, on themes from Le Nonnambulle, executed by Signor Oudin, was also a brilliant and artistic performance. Le Sacre de Valse very sweetly rendered "Laocoön et ses fils" (from Le Troisième) and being recalled by mentioned, Andante avec moto and

The concert, which was in every respect a success, was brought to a close about 11 o'clock by the singing of the national anthem.

— LAMENTABLE OCCURRENCE. — The death of the new man and young woman who were found dead in the sand on Thursday morning last, formed the subject of a summer's inquest yesterday. The inquest was commenced on Friday last, and adjourned to yesterday, in order to allow Dr. Henwick time to make a post-mortem examination of the body of the girl, as the jury were not satisfied, from the position in which the bodies were found—that their hands and shoulders being out of the sand—that they died from suffocation. It appeared from the evidence, that the youth, who was named Hugh Green, and was about seventeen years of age, had been accustomed to work in barbers' shops, and at the time of the fatal occurrence he was in the employment of a barber in Market-street. The girl was named Jane Pennington, and was aged sixteen years. Her mother, who was married to a coloured man, and was not a woman of good character, died about three weeks ago, and since that occurrence the deceased girl had spent the greater part of her time away from home, wandering about with disreputable characters, fifteen had been intimates with her, according to the evidence.

able time, and on his person were found a number of letters purporting to have been written by her to him when he was recently away for several weeks at Lake Macquarie on a fishing excursion. She could neither read nor write, so the letters must have been written by a friend at her dictation. On one occasion she saw Green speaking to a strange woman, and a girl who was in the habit of wandering about the streets with the deceased girl, maid, she (Pennington) said she would never have let her hear of a man like him. Almost returns to Snyder, however, they appear to have been so pretty good friends. Green left his employer's shop at the usual hour on Wednesday evening last, and no one appears to have seen him afterward till his body was found on Thursday morning. A milkman named John McNeill was passing over the sandhills at about six o'clock on Thursday morning, and saw lying between two sandhills, near Cleveland-street, the upper part of the body of deceased. McNeill went up to the spot, took hold of one of deceased's hands, and said: "The hold was on it, I tell you."

The body of the unfortunate lady was lying about sixteen inches or two feet from that of her paramour, and a great portion of her body was covered deeply by the sand, but her head was clear except as regards the loose sand, which would not impede respiration. The police were informed of the circumstance, and shortly afterwards had the bodies removed to the dead-house of the Beauvilliers.

Asylum. The deceased girl had no boots or stockings on when her body was discovered, but they were dug out of the sand subsequently, as well as her hair-net. Dr. Benwick made a post-mortem examination of the body of the female, and found satisfactory evidence that death resulted from asphyxia by suffocation. The appearance alone indicated that the poor creature had struggled a good deal after the sand fell on her. The bank of sand that fell on them was about three feet in thickness, and was supposed to be composed of the fine sand consequence of the

The jury returned the following verdict:—"We find that Hugh Green and Jane Pennington came to their deaths by the falling of a sand-bank upon their bodies at Bedford, but from what cause we have no evidence to determine, and we believe they were immoral characters."

COMBINE'S INQUIRY.—An inquiry into the circumstances attending the death of the late Little stands attending the reason for a child's wounds, and five years, was commenced by the City Coroner's office on Saturday last, and concluded yesterday. The child's mother keeps a little shop in Crown-street, Westmoreland, and while she was attending to the shop on the afternoon of Friday last, the child, with several others, went down into the kitchen to play. While there her back clothing (it is believed that she had been sitting with her back to the fire) took fire, and she gave the alarm in a fearful scream. A Mrs. Kelly heard it, and ran over to assist her. She was unable to do so, however, as the

The little culprit's back was found to be much injured in the region of the spine, and at the recommendation of a medical man she was removed to the infirmary, where she died about twelve hours after her admission. Coroner's finding: "Died from injuries received by her clothes taking fire."

SUDDEN DEATH.—A man named John Barton, residing in Pitt-street South, fell down suddenly and expired in his residence, at about nine o'clock yesterday morning. The coroner's jury yesterday recorded that the in-

ROBBERY IN A JEWELLER'S SHOP.—A burglary had been committed yesterday, at the premises of Messrs. Finck and Bookmann, Market-street, between the house of one and two, there being at the time no one but a boy in charge of the shop, the other assistants having retired for dinner. It appears that a diamond of gold diamond ring was the window attracted the attention of the thief who went into the premises and threw a number of packages, the face of the juvenile, who was consequently rendered blind for a time; the thief thereupon lifted the treasure and decamped, throwing the packages used on the street, until he was captured at the corner of Market-street, and given into custody.

RAILWAY ACCIDENT.—An accident, by which it is feared that the unfortunate person injured was killed, occurred on the Great Southern Railway, near Newcastle, on Friday evening. A girl about twelve years of age, accompanied by her sister, and a brother, who was a passenger by the train, were on the train when it was passing through the field and Peter-ham, the unfortunate girl was looking out of the carriage near her hands on the door. Suddenly the door, which it appears could not have been properly fastened, flew open, and the poor girl fell out of the carriage. A loud alarm was given, but it was not heard; and therefore, the train continued on its journey. It was not till the train arrived at Peter-ham that the occurrence being reported to the guard the train stopped along the line till the girl was picked up. The accident occurred, and there the poor creature was found lying on the side of the rail, quite unconscious, and she was revived. She was placed in one of the carriages and brought on to Sydney, and thence removed to her parents' residence, where she was put under medical treatment.

AN ACCIDENT ON THE GREAT NORTHERN RAILWAY.—Our Newcastle correspondent writes that the man named John Gilbert, employed in shunting the coal trains at Newcastle, engaged on Friday night, the coupling chain got fast, and the unfortunate man was killed. He was on the train at coal truck, severely injuring his back and legs. He was pronounced favourably. This is the first accident that has occurred while loading vessels during the night. It is the present case the Martha Riley, brig, was loading, and the night was very dark.

"Followers" by Mr. Purves. Mr. Stephens' enthusiasm for the play was very great credit.

BALMAIN MUSICAL ENTERTAINING.—On Friday evening the society gave their annual concert. There was singing a large choice of pieces selected from Walpole's admired songs of the "Mistresses," and such as were specially adapted for the first time, as well as doership of the highest quality. A few recitations particularly the delightful duo for soprano and contralto, "Bairned Bogle," which was exceedingly sung, as well as the famous ballad "Auld Robin Gray," in contralto. The celebrated tenor song "Let me be like a soldier fall," was also beautifully executed, and met with well-merited encore. The programme was of the highest order, and also received an encore. The concert was perfect. Indeed, the concert throughout was a great success.

CONCERT.—A complimentary concert was given Friday evening, in the Masonic Hall, to Signor Gualco, a tribute to his eminent musical talents and in recognition of his personal and artistic services. During Signor Gualco's residence in Sydney he has been giving a musical circle as a brilliant and graceful pianist—as a composer of music and as an earnest lover of his art. The large and distinguished assemblage of his sister artists, his talents as a musician and his worth as a private citizen, have been held in high esteem, and it was evident from the enthusiasm displayed that the loss of his absence from this colony will be regretted as a personal and artistic loss.

The concert was under the management of the Hon. C. George, Esq., M.L.A., and a committee of gentlemen, who have secured the services of the Signor.

and several other lady amateurs. La Serna sang well, although an amateur, is a vocalist of superior artistic standing with the technique of some of the most talented masters in Spain, and gained some of his musical education in London and Paris. Among the gentlemen amateurs having a musical education were Mr. J. Waller and Mr. J. Bushnell. The performance of the Brothers Herman was a musical treat. While one displayed great taste and skill as a pianist, the other did his best to make the most of his position as a musical instrument. The concert commenced pianissimo with an instrumental solo by Signor Giulio—Etude de Concert—and then, as the song, Mr. J. Bushnell sang the aria, "Infamia e crudeltà," and another one sang, with considerable sweetness and effect, "Com'è bello," from Luciole Borgia. The side which follows is fantastically beautiful. The performance was the signal for enthusiastic applause. It was a composition of Thalberg, the productions of whose pen are proverbially difficult to surpass. The song, which can perform his compositions with proper effect, is their composer. Still it is difficult to believe that in this instance justice was done to the author. La Serna de Valera sang an air introduced by Mr. May, from the opera of L'Esclave d'Amore, from the pen of De Béri. He commenced somewhat timidly, but seemed immediately to gain confidence and at the close of the first measure Mr. J. Waller executed the piece allotted to him in the programme with his usual ability. His rich bass voice was heard to great advantage in "Voilà l'art le tyran's power," and in the ballad, "Il

"Largo of Frotolium," in which he was scored. The instrumental duet, for pianoforte and violin, composed by the brother Hermann, was a masterpiece to which brilliancy of execution and classic taste were combined. The fantasia, by Thalberg, on themes from Liszt, was enthusiastically received by the audience, and artistic performance. La Seours de Valre was very sweetly rendered. "Lacoe a note" (from Il Trovatore) and being recalled by continued applause sang with much sweetness of tone and with the accompaniment which she was enthusiastically applauded. An instrumental duet for two pianofortes (by Thalberg) was performed by the two children, and the concert closed with a theme was from the opera of Norma, and it is needless to add that it was a fine display of musical taste and artistic skill. The concert, which was in every respect a success, was brought to a close about 11 o'clock by the singing of the national anthem.

LAMENTABLE OCCURRENCE.—The death of the young man and young woman who were married last night on Thursday morning last, formed the subject of a somber's inquest yesterday. The inquest was commenced on Friday last, and adjourned until the 10th inst. Dr. Bewick time to make a post-mortem examination of the body of the girl, as the jury were not satisfied from the position in which the bodies were found—their heads and shoulders being cut off at the neck, and the cause of their suffocation. It appeared from the evidence, that the youth, who was named Hugh Green, was also a servant of the same family, and had been accustomed to work in barbers' shops, and at the time of the fatal occurrence he was in the employment of a barber in Market-street. The girl was named Jane Pennington, and lived in the same street, and was a servant of the

She could neither read nor write, and the letters were all written by her friend at her dictation. On a recent occasion she saw Green speaking to a strange woman, and a girl, who was in the habit of wandering about the streets with the deceased girl, said she saw her and that she would poison herself if she saw him do it again. Since his return to Sydney, however, they appear to have been as pretty good friends as ever, and the employer of the girl has heard from her on Wednesday evening last, when he had no opportunity to have seen him afterwards till the body was found at Thursday morning. A milkman named Joe McNeil was passing over the bridge at about 10 o'clock on the morning, and saw lying between two sandhills, near Cleveland-street, the upper part of the body of deceased McNeil went up to the spot, and found the body with its hands and feet stretched out. The body was on its left side, with sand covering the lower extremities up to the knees; the head and shoulders were clear, except a small quantity of loose sand which was on the face and neck. The body of the unfortunate girl was lying about eighteen inches or two feet from that of her paramour, and a greater portion of her body was covered with sand, and her head was close to his except as regards the lower end, which would not impede respiration. The police were

Asylum. The deceased girl had no boots or stockings on when her body was discovered, but they were dug out of the sand externally, as well as a pair of shoes. The girl's back made a good natural examination of the body of the female, and found satisfactory evidence that death resulted from asphyxia by suffocation. The appearance of the face indicated that the post-mortem changes had actually set in after the sand fell on her. The bank of sand that fell on them was about three feet in thickness, and was supposed to weigh about a ton. The post-mortem appearance of the female's body, the external appearance of the body of the male, afforded ample evidence of immoral coarseness on the part of both.

Very respectfully,
J. H. Green and Jane Pennington came to their deaths by the falling of a sand-bank upon their bodies, at Hethers, but we have no cause to have an inquest on them; and we believe that they were natural causes."

CORONER'S INQUIRY.—An inquiry into the circumstances attending the death of a child named John Littlebrook, aged five years, was commenced by the City Coroner at his office on Saturday last, and concluded yesterday. The child's mother keeps a little shop in Crown-street, Woolton, and while she was attending to the shop at the afternoon of Friday last, the child, with several other young boys, was playing in the garden, and the child fell down into the kitchen to play. While there he was back kicking (it is believed that he had been in the kitchen back to the fire) into the fire, and was killed. The child was a cheerful roamer. A Mrs. Kelly heard it, and on seeing what was the matter threw some water over the child, and exclaimed, "the flames are on him." The little fellow was badly injured in the region of the spine, and at the recommendation of a medical man she was removed to the infirmary, where she died about twenty hours after her admission. Donner's death.—Died from injuries received by her clothes taking fire.

SUDDEN DEATH.—A man named John Barton, residing in Pitt-street South, fell down suddenly and expired in his residence, at about nine o'clock yesterday morning. He had been ailing some time, and it is believed that the immediate cause of death was disease of the heart. A inquest will be held to-day.

LOBBERY IN A JEWELLER'S SHOP.—A baronet that was committed yesterday, at the premises of Messrs. Finck and Bookman, Marble-arch, between the hours of one and two, there being at the time no one but a boy in charge of the shop, the other customers having retired to dinner. It appears that a dishful of gold ornaments in the window attracted the attention of the thief, who was taken to the premises and threw a handful of pepper into the face of the jeweller, who was consequently compelled to close the door for a time; the thief thereupon took the jewels and disappeared, leaving the poor man on the street, and he was captured at the corner of Marble-arch, and given into custody.

the other. "It is happened," I selected an one of servants to go and fetch my brother. He returned in a few minutes and said that he could keep their seats without interfering with the "performances." We each took a "brother," and I conventionally say that I bound mine hand and foot to the other, and then we sat down. I placed my brother upon one of the before-mentioned seats, placing him upon one of a cord (that said his hands) through the seat at his back, and then I took another seat, and I placed my brother upon the other. I was sitting and waiting my business. I first tied a cord round one wrist and with two knots, I then tied the other wrist round the other's. I afterwards fastened the two wrists together, and then I placed my brother upon the other. I was sitting in a sitting position. Next I bound the legs together, and then to the seat, and lastly, I secured the feet. I then placed my brother upon the other. In fact, I did it to the point, and then I placed my brother upon the other.
